1. A gasoline dump is located at Kuznchok (50°59' N-16°13' E), Poland, between ul. Sobczynska and the railroad tracks, near the railroad station and opposite the outlet of ul. Karola Miarki. The dump is a remodeled pre-war German alcohol storage depot. During World War II the Germans stored alcohol there for the Air Force unit stationed in the town. The dump has its own railroad siding; it was formerly double-tracked, but a third track was added in the spring of 1952. At about the same time one large metal tank about 2.5 meters high and 10 meters long and two smaller tanks of undetermined size arrived at the depot and were placed in the ground.
2. The entire depot covers an area about 120 meters long and 70 meters wide and is surrounded by a brick wall 2.5 meters high. There are two entrances for motor vehicles and one for trains. Three or four tank cars are almost always standing at the unloading platform. Since the workers have to pay fines if loading is not completed on schedule, it is possible that three or four tank cars arrive at the depot twice each day. The capacity of the dump is not known. It has been used to store gasoline since the spring of 1952. The dump supplies gasoline to PCR's, POM's and PKB's. No military cars were ever observed at the dump.
3. The depot is under civilian administration and is guarded by industrial police.
